New Purser On Humboldt

The Humboldt management made no mistake in their selection of Ira Cohen as purser of their vessel, succeeding Purser Shepard, who has returned to his old stamping ground, San Francisco. Mr. Cohen is one of the best known steamboat men in the whole northern business, has a host of friends at every stopping place, and knows his business from a to z. The choice is a happy one—a good move on the part of Mr. Kalish, and a decided convenience to the Humboldt's patrons.

Experiment In Fishing

An experiment which may have a very important bearing upon the future of the fishing industry is about to be tried at South Bend, Wash. The proprietor of a salmon cannery at that place has sent to England for a supply of deep-sea fishing trolls and gear, which he will turn over to fishermen for the purpose of finding out whether or not salmon can be caught all of the year around in salt water.

A Busy Week For Ole

The advent of a son and heir last Thursday morning and the launching of his new gas boat a day or two later, have given Ole Hanson a busy week of it this last seven days. The baby and his mother are both doing finely under Dr. Dawes care, while the gas boat is, in Ole's opinion, the finest one in the harbor.

Gets 50 Tons Of Coal.

The Meteor left 50 tons of coal on the local wharf for Sam Cunningham. Sam had been short of the black fuel for some little time, but this amount will hold him for a while. Owing to her not having her papers in shape to allow of her discharging the coal at this place, the vessel had to lay here idle until the opening of the cable office Tuesday morning, when telegraphic permission was secured from Juneau to go ahead with the discharging.

Born to George Skelton and wife. Wednesday morning, a son.

Narrowly Escapes Drowning

The lower end of town sustained a bad scare last Saturday, when Robert, one of Adj. Smith's little sons, fell into the water in front of Willis Hoagland's house, and but for the quick action of Clair Snyder and Frank Farrar would have been drowned. The little fellow had been playing on the waterfront watching the high tide come in with its burden of chips and drift wood. One of these latter attracted the boys attention and he leaned over to pick it up. In some way his feet slipped and down he went into five or six feet of water, where he sank to the bottom. It took the other children who were playing with him probably a couple of minutes before they could attract the attention of anybody to rescue the boy but at last they did, and Teddy Carlson and Farrar and Snyder hurried to the spot. He was lifted from the water, worked over for a little time to see if the spark of life remained, and then rushed to Dr. Shurick's office where the good work was continued until he was out of danger.

New Industry In Wrangell

"Bill" Lloyd is meeting with considerable success in his venture in the herring catching business. Every year there is a shortage of bait for halibut fishing, so this year Mr. Lloyd concluded that he would take time by the forelock when the herring were plentiful, and he has been catching and salting them for some time past. The results of his work are about one hundred and fifty barrels of herring all ready for business. Salt herring are selling for $2.50 per barrel at Petersburg at this time, so that there is a fair market even now, notwithstanding the fact that fresh herring are still plentiful.

Keel Laid For New Boat

"Dad" Inman has begun work on the mild curing boat he is to construct for Capt. Ed. Lyons and Claude Blankington. She will be 45 feet in length with a beam of 11 over all. She will replace the launch Cora K.

Adj. Smith was called over to Petersburg last week to officiate at the marriage of James E. Jackson, son of Sumdum George; and Annie Allen, Jack Allen's step daughter. The ceremony took place on Friday and a big wedding supper was spread the next evening.

Moving To The Front

"Jack" Lindsay has been over from Petersburg the greater part of the week, and reports the fish metropolis as booming. Buildings are going up everywhere he says, the latest being for a hotel. The parsonage for the Presbyterian Church is nearing completion, and a few weeks of fine weather will witness the erection and occupation of the church building itself.

A Turkeyless Thanksgiving

For some reason best known to the powers that be in the steamship business in Seattle, the steamer Dolphin, which took the Jefferson's run for a trip, did not get away from Seattle until Sunday night, with the result that the greater number of the towns north of us will be without turkeys until so late that Thanksgiving will have to be pulled off without the "national bird" on the table. This is absolutely inexcusable, as the Dolphin was tied up in Seattle for a whole week and could have sailed from there a day or even two earlier just as well as not.

New Light Established

The coast lighting service announces the installation of an unwatched acetylene beacon showing a single white flash every three seconds, on Rocky island, at the Northeastern entrance of Icy strait. The light, illuminating the entire horizon, is shown from the top of a small wooden house on the northerly end, and highest point, of Rocky island at a height of 51 feet above the water, and should be visible in clear weather about 8 miles the observer's eye being 15 above the water.

Church Bazaar

Friday, December 9, is the date on which the Catholic ladies will hold their Fall Bazaar. There will be many new attractions for all and the fancy table will be just the place to purchase your Christmas gifts. The proceeds will go towards the completion of the local

REDUCING POSTAL RATES

We have the promise of postage reduction. If we have not the real promise, it is at least among the Postmaster General Hitchcock says that before the end of the next fiscal year the Federal postal establishment will be self-sustaining, and that this will be brought about without the curtailment of service or the lessening of efficiency.

In this there is no direct promise of reduced postage; but the promise as outlined, has elicited the suggestion of a one cent letter rate from one end of the country to the other. The suggestion has broadened into general discussion, and such discussion usually bears fruit.

Mr. Hitchcock is also credited with the unofficial statement that reduced expenditures and greater revenue realized from the rapidly increasing volume of business handled by the postal department must eventually lead to the adoption of a one cent rate. This will appeal to the public as a straight business proposition, and the more so as the public is wont to consider that the postal department was created for the public service rather than for the public profit, directly considered as a matter of dollars and cents.

There has been a loud and bitter complaint against the inefficient and extravagant methods which have characterized the management of the Federal postoffice. Much of that complaint was undeserved, and though some of it was warranted, no one argues that the department could have done so much for the public or would have done it so cheaply if it had been managed by a corporate business concern. Admitted that the postal department has not at all times given the public the benefit of economical business management, and we must admit, on the other hand, that there has been at all times an absence of the extortionate charge for service which characterizes the conduct of the express companies. In other words, the benefits of postal management, such as they have been, and they have been great, have accrued to the people and not to a group of private individuals.

Among our Alaskan exchanges there are several that, while they evidently mean well, have a queer way of going about it. They contend that now that Mr. Wickersham has been elected to the honored position of delegate, political opponents should cease their clamor and give him a chance to accomplish something for the good of the territory. Up to this point we have no fault to find. But why not apply the same method to the case of Governor Clark? What is to be gained by continually classing the governor with knaves and political tricksters. Give him a chance, and let the war cease until there is need of war. Alaska has all the reputation she needs as a source of dissension and quarrels.

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of trained workers, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, and reinforced by many eminent specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unsparing scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In size of vocabulary, in richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

HAPPENINGS of INTEREST IN THE BUSY NORTH

W. J. Bledso, a Skagway grocer has discovered a quartz ledge near the Windy City.

The Alaska Steamship Company's Northwestern reached Seattle on Nov. 1 with 632 passengers from the north.

The Canadian Fish & Cold Storage Co., Ltd., has begun the construction of a plant at Prince Rupert, to cost $500,000.

Friends and admirers of former Governor A. P. Swineford have started a fund for the erection of a monument to his memory.

A casting weighing 1600 pounds was recently turned out at Skagway foundry, which is considered something immense.

An application was made to the U. S. court at Ketchikan for the appointment of a receiver for the Juneau Telephone company.

A Ketchikan saloon keeper sold a drink to a man who had been "siwashed" and the court fined him $50 and revoked his license.

The freighter Seward, of the Alaska S. S. Co., reached Tacoma on the first instant with a cargo of gypsum from Gypsum, Alaska.

J. H. Young, president, and C. J. Jones, traffic manager of the Alaska Steamship company, have removed their offices from pier 2 to the general offices of the Northwestern Commercial company, on the fifth floor of the Lowman building.

Luke L. House, colored, aged 55, a well known character in Linn canal ports, died last month and was buried at Haines. The Pioneer says:—"His skin was black, but his soul was as white as the snow that covers our rugged hills.

The Ketchikan Miner tells of the drowning of Peter Johnson and his son Lewis last month near Dolomi. The boy was washed overboard from the bow of a gasoline boat and the father jumped in to rescue him. Both were swept from view by a huge wave, leaving the mother and son on the boat helpless. The bodies were afterwards recovered.

A monthly mail service will be installed into the Iditarod from Innoko and Nulato next Monday. No more than 400 pounds of mail will be carried on one trip. A route from Innoko to Ophir will be established at the same time. Authority has been given the contract on the Fairbanks-Valdez route to send the mail by railroad to Cordova, but he is to be held responsible for its delivery in the event of blockade or other delays on the line.—Seattle P. I.

Closed Tight On Sundays

Petersburg occupies an unique position among the towns of Alaska, she observes the Sunday closing law. Everything in the place from the saloons down to the smallest place of business is closed on Sunday. There is considerable kicking from some quarters, but an ordinance to this effect was recently enacted, and popular opinion seems to be that the law should be enforced—at least until the close of the duck hunting season.

Satisfactory work is what Dr.
Mathis' guarantees. Those who have been treated by him testify to the quality.
